Ahoy Mates! Welcome to Trader Ku's Beach Comber Lounge...furnished with genuine ship lights, hatch covers, and other authentic fixtures from six different vessels—the U.S.S. Topeka, the Bowie, the Marvin H. McIntyre, the S.S. Grandville, the U.S.S. Sproston and the S.S. Antares. Among these, the Antares has perhaps one of the more colorful historic backgrounds. The S.S. Antares was launched from Hog Island, Pennsylvania, on May 30, 1919. She was commissioned by the Navy on February 23, 1922, with Lt. Cdr. R.E. Pinkham in command. Before World War II, Antares served in target repair and photography, but was reclassified as a general stores issue ship on November 30, 1940.

Antares arrived in Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, just two hours prior to the Japanese attack which propelled the United States into war. She was lying-to outside the harbor when the first assault began, but escaped major damage through the skillful maneuvering of her commander. Between April 1942 and May 1945, Antares, equipped for warfare as a cargo ship, transported supplies to Samoa, New Caledonia, New Zealand, the New Hebrides, the Solomans, and the Carolines. Shifting to Guam from Ulithi on April 21, 1945, she was routed onward to Saipan and Okinawa. She arrived at Kerama Retto on May 10, 1945, and furnished logistic support for the Okinawa operation until June 18. On June 28, 1945, while on route to Pearl Harbor, Antares was attacked by Japanese submarines and a human torpedo. The subs were destroyed by the combined efforts of the U.S.S. Sproston and American fighter planes. The human torpedo dived after being brought under fire and was not seen again.

Antares continued to serve on occupation duty in Korea and China until April 18, 1946. She was decommissioned on August 2, 1946, and was awarded two Battle Stars, one for Pearl Harbor and the other for occupation of Okinawa Gunto. She also earned the Navy Occupation Service Medal and the China Service Medal.
